Research and Map the Anti-Corruption Institutional Landscape in Thailand

Project Title	Research and Map the Anti-Corruption Institutional Landscape in Thailand
Project Summary	Map the anti-corruption institutional landscape in Thailand. Dig into what government institutions exist, what their roles are, and their comparative strengths and weaknesses. How are they effective and where could they be more effective? What exists on paper but less so in reality?
Country	Thailand

Project Description

Love getting into the nitty gritty of political systems and governments? Then put your research and analytical skills to the test as part of the Economic team at U.S. Embassy Bangkok. Research, analyze, and synthesize information across a broad range of sources to map the anti-corruption institutional landscape in Thailand. What government institutions exist, what are their roles, and what are their comparative strengths and weaknesses? How are they effective and where could they be more effective? What exists officially, but in practice is may differ--and to what extent?

Using your research and consultations with Economic team mentors, you will produce an executive summary report along with more detailed analysis for use by the not only the Economic team, but other sections and agencies to support Mission Thailand goals.

Candidates should be curious, self-motivated, and open to collaboration and feedback.

Required Skills or Interests

Skill(s)
Data analysis
Economic analysis
Political Analysis
Research
Writing

Additional Information

There is potential for this project to grow beyond the initial scope, depending on the quality of work, analytical skills, and the initiative of the selected intern.

Language Requirements

Language Speaking Proficiency Reading Proficiency Importance

Thai No practical proficiency Limited working proficiency Nice to Have